GERMAN REPLY CREATES GRAVE SITUATION

PRESIDENT WILSON TO ACT DELIBERATELY AND FIRMLY ON NOTE

CHIEF EXECUTIVE TO DECIDE BANK GERMANY

NOTE THOROUGHLY UNSATISFACTORY

Negotiations Are Back to Point Created by Sinking of Lusitania -No Need for Haste.

Washington, July 10.—A grave view of the situation produced by Germany's refusal to meet the demands of the United States growing out of the sinking of the Lusitania is taken by the officials at Washington

Upon the president rests the burden of deciding the policy the United States will follow. That he is quietly and carefully considering the situation was stated at the White House after telephone communications with the president at Cornish, New Hampshire, and the country may expect him to act with "deliberation as well as firmness" when he has examined all the phases of the problem.

Secretary Lensing withheld com-

Secretary Lansing withheld comment. As soon as the complete offi-cial text of the German reply arrives he will make a careful study and go to Cornish to confer with Wilson.

he will make a careful study and go to Cornish to conter with Wilson.

Three sections of the note had arrived tonight. The last two will arrive tomorrow. The president may return by Tuesday and lay before the cabinet the course he decided upon.

What action the United States will take the officials could not predict with certainty. Some familiar with the president's views and the details of the situation pointed out that there seemed only one course open with dignity and honor to the United States—the continued assertion and exercise of the rights of neutrals on the high seas in accordance with the established principles of international law. The responsibility for any rupture of friendly relations which subsequently might ensue was declared would then fall upon Germany. It is the unanimous verdict of high officials that the German reply is thoroughly unsatisfactory. It leaves the situation exactly at the point where it was in the days immediately following the sinking of the Lusitanta. There is little tendency among officials to hurry. It is pointed out that the sinking of ships without warning has not been previous descriptions.

An analysis of the mofficial text of

An analy is of the unofficial text of the note confirmed the impressions given by Ambassador Gerard during the past tew days that practically none of the American demands would be heeded. The ambassador had reason to believe two weeks ago a lavorable suswer might be expected within a week, though he has cabled Washington repeatedly not to expect a satisfactory answer.

Just, what is responsible for the change in the situation and final determination of the German government to refuse to give the assurances aske dofficials here wouldn't say. Many, however, didn't, hesitate to comment on the apparent similar in the proposal made with the view expressed by former ascretary Bryan. There have been frequent intimations, too, through officials believed applied to the same of the United States was divided.
